The Postdoc Pathways Café Series

Our second PPC event features Dr. Kristie Fisher, who will join us at noon on February 8th!

Kristie is a user experience researcher at Google. Researchers at Google gather data and insights to inform all phases of the product development cycle. Kristie conducts foundational research to understand people's needs and define target groups for a given new product or feature, usability studies to help refine and iterate on ideas in partnership with designers and engineers, and survey and usage data analyses to understand how Google products are being used in the wild. Kristie received her PhD in cognitive psychology from the University of Washington in 2011, with a focus on problem solving and analogical reasoning. Before joining Google she worked as a user experience researcher at Microsoft Studios and as a contracted researcher at Microsoft Research.
