Postdoc Career Development Virtual Workshop Series

Careers in National Security: How to Get There From Where You Are

Leesa Duckworth will engage you with her own intriguing story of how and why she transitioned from a PhD in Psychology to her fulfilling career in national security. She will also explain the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) fellowship and how that provides an excellent paid on-ramp into national security careers of many kinds.

Several of our own ND grad students and postdocs have already have benefited from this competitive gold-standard program!

Date: Tuesday, April 21
Time: 4:00 - 5:00 p.m. EDT

SWOT Analysis Workshop
Erik Oswald from the Graduate Career Services team will be conducting a virtual "SWOT" analysis workshop open to all postdocs, graduate and undergraduate students.

Knowing your Strengths and Weaknesses and then being able to identify the job market's Opportunities and Threats is a strategic approach that can give you a competitive advantage in your job search.

Conduct a SWOT analysis and give yourself an edge!

Date: Thursday, April 23
Time: 11:00 a.m. EDT

English for Academic Purposes Workshop Series

A Little Grammar Goes a Long Way: Part II

Building on last week's grammar workshop, Part II will look at clauses, conditionals, indirect statements, and those topics that pose particular problems for those whose native language is not English.

If you're one of the first 20 registrants for this workshop, you can win a copy of Strunk & White's classic grammar help book, Elements of Style, for free!

Date: Monday, April 27
Time: 3:30 p.m. - 4:45 p.m. EDT

Postdoc Interview Training Practice

Join Erik Oswald, Graduate Career Consultant, for an innovative new workshop to develop and practice your interview skills. In groups of three postdocs, you will rotate through the roles of interviewer, interviewee, and observer after a brief training session. Participant feedback from prior events has been positive:

“Having the chance to listen to other people’s interviews and then being able to interview in front of multiple peers (rather than just one), made the experience feel very real and, in turn, became a really great practice for a real interview.”
Postdocs on the Job Market: Diversity Statement Reviews

Diversity Statements, Statements of Commitment to Diversity, or Contributions to Diversity Statements, are becoming an increasingly common requirement when applying for academic faculty positions, post-doc opportunities, and fellowships.

Pamela Nolan Young, Notre Dame's Director for Academic Diversity and Inclusion, has graciously offered to review your completed diversity statements via a Zoom consultation.

Please email your statement to Pamela at pyoung3@nd.edu and set up a time for your consultation.

Applications Open: Responsible Innovation Fellowship

The Graduate School, the IDEA Center, and the Technology Ethics Center at Notre Dame present a new opportunity open to doctoral students, postdocs, and law students beginning Fall 2020: a one-year, NSF-funded fellowship program that combines cross-disciplinary collaboration, technology ethics, and commercialization experience.
The Responsible Innovation Fellowship is a unique blend of practical and theoretical training; of education and implementation; and of insights and contributions from across disciplines. If you would like to explore how your interests and skill-set can contribute to shaping the future of ethical innovation, this program is for you.

Fellowships carry a supplemental stipend of $3,000. For more information about the application process, click here.

Did You Know...

...that several of Notre Dame's musical treasures sing weekly at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart? Even though they cannot sing and worship together at this unprecedented time of social distancing, they are finding a way to connect with the ND community!

Early Release of the Notre Dame Folk Choir's New Album
During this uncertain time of isolation and separation, the Notre Dame Folk Choir is announcing the early release of “Catch the Spirit,” an exploration of sacred music from the African American and East African traditions. More information on the album's creation, release, artistic collaborators and related images and videos can be accessed at www.folkchoir.com. Now available!
